Dear [redacted] STATINTL

STA

It was great to have had the chance to chat with you last week when I was down there for the seminar. I gave Dan a copy of my book on the Senate and hope that you can pry it loose from him and read it yourself.

As I mentioned at the time, I am most anxious to have a speaker from the agency come up here to Rutgers to discuss the role and organization of the Central Intelligence Agency. While I do have organizational charts in abundance, they really have a rather lifeless quality and I feel the rather urgent need for someone to put some life into them. Essentially, I would like the speaker to discuss the relationship between the NSC and the CIA, and the role of the DCI vis a vis other elements in the intelligence community such as DIA and INR and what the various components of CIA do.

I have two classes in which this semester's focus is the role of intelligence agencies. One is a graduate course and the other is an upper-level undergraduate course. If the registration figures are any indication, there is a keen and active interest on the part of students. Both classes meet on Tuesdays and the semester runs until the first week of May.

I will happily abide by any ground-rules set forth by the speaker or the agency and will be happy to make any arrangements for an overnight stay here at Rutgers. I think that it would be a useful experience both for the students and for the speaker and would be grateful for anything that you could do to help me to secure a speaker.

To my knowledge, there are four foreign nationals in the graduate course and one in the undergraduate course if that is a consideration.

Sincerely,

Ross K. Baker

REMARKS Prof. Baker is a regular participant in both our Advanced Intelligence Seminar (AIS) and Senior Seminar (SS) programs. He is an outstanding scholar, and a true friend of the Agency. Indeed, he specifically includes participation in Agency programs on his curriculum vitae. He mentioned his interest in an Agency speaker(s) at the time of his presentation to the last running of the AIS. I asked that he spell out the details in a letter to me and that I could then offer suggestions as well as forward his request to you with an acknowledgment of his contributions to Agency training. I have suggested to Ross several former Agency personnel as possible speakers. If you have further questions, please call. I would appreciate any help you can give Ross.
